THE RACE WAR.

Great Excitement Caused Among the Whites of Virginia by the Danville Riot.

A Largely-Attended Mass-Meeting Held at Richmond Yesterday —Resolutions.

Hearty Sympathy with the Citizens of Danville Expressed and Their Action Commended.

The People Everywhere Advised to Put Down Any Attempted Rising with a Strong Hand.

Fears of Further Trouble—Effect and Remedy—Effect of the Outbreak on the Election.

PETERSBURG, Va., Nov. 4.—[Special.]—The riot and its accidental and unnecessary bloodshed has aroused the deepest feeling among the white people of every section of this State. In Richmond a large mass-meeting was held to-day at which resolutions were passed expressing hearty sympathy with the victims of Danville, and advising the people to every effort in the future to prevent an outbreak of the unreasoning fury made by the colored people to take it down on the citizens of Danville etc.

DANVILLE.

In Lynchburg, which is about fifty miles from Danville, a like excitement prevails, and the matter has been the topic of excited conversation among all classes of people all day long.

In Norfolk, steamer to Norfolk by the excursion circular to be taken Danville passengers, public feeling is at the highest pitch, while in Fredericksburg, Staunton, Lynchburg, and all other public centers the assembly was quiet.

THE SITUATION.

Danville has been patrolled all day by armed men determined to preserve the peace at whatever cost. They have ordered by a new form meeting, and the colored will continue to greet the town until after the election.

Walter Leonard, the young man who was believed to have received a mortal wound in the head, is doing better to-day, the ball having been extracted, and hopes are now entertained of his recovery.

A number of the wounded colored men, however, died to-day, thus swelling the list of killed to six.

The burial of those who were killed on the race yesterday took place this afternoon. An immense crowd of colored people was in attendance, all the colored members of the place having turned out for the occasion.

No further disorder is anticipated in Danville, though some people there express the opinion that the excitement of election-day may provoke disturbances.

Quiet is Petersburg everything is quiet, and although the colored population mostly the white to vote it is the most orderly and no disturbance of any kind is anticipated, though white police will be always in readiness.

NOT CLEARED.

Gen. Cameron, when approached to give his opinion concerning the trouble in Danville said he was digusted, and that now was no time to mention them. Gregg Dow, a partisan, complained, and that he was fully impressed with but one idea—namely: to exterminate the negro race from all the states at the earliest moment. A better settlement for him to do so.

THE DEAD.

DANVILLE, Va., Nov. 4.—Besides the five persons reported killed last night, it is said two others have since died. The names of only four have been obtained. Justice Earl and Tom Davis, servants of the Arlington Hotel, and Jack Smith, and Peter Wyborn, the latter on the street corner to have been killed. The bodies of these found dead on the streets were handed over to friends and taken away.

THE WOUNDED.

Charles Adams, Edward Bailey, and Thomas Ryan were slightly wounded.

Walter Leitner, shot in the head, was son of C. G. Leitner, Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. He cannot recover, and hopes are entertained of his recovery.

J. E. Maynard, shot in the abdomen, will recover.

Robert Valentine was shot in the head accidentally as it struck last night.

A MEMORIAL.

Wells, E. H. Matthews, George Coleman, and F. S. Gentry, on duty as armed police, were passing a house occupied by colored people in the outskirts of the city when some one fired upon them, about twenty shots were given and returned. Gabbert received several shots in the head and leg; he bore was removed to several places. The party entered the building, captured a negro, William Coleman, an ex-town-prison-man found, brought to depot before a company, a "vigilance," three barrels of wood and some kerosene, and some powder and ball. The negro begged to be allowed to say his prayers, which was granted to him, and he was then shot to death.

GENERAL AND CONFIDENCE.

No apprehension of further trouble is felt in the vicinity of Danville. Governor Cameron, Chairman of the State Democratic Committee, and other prominent members of the party, are in consultation at the Governor's office. Congressman Lamb, of the Norfolk district, and Congressman Wise, of the Richmond district, are also present. Governor Cameron has issued a proclamation calling upon the people to preserve the peace at whatever cost.

ALL QUIET.

THE MINT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 4.—[Special.]—The report of Mr. Burchard, Director of the Mint, contains four principal recommendations. First, the discontinuance of coinage of the gold dollars. Second, the discontinuance of the coinage of the three-cent piece. Third, the repeal of the act authorizing the coinage of the trade dollar. Fourth, the repeal or modification of the act authorizing the coinage of the standard silver dollar. The argument in support of the first three propositions will probably evoke little opposition. The gold dollar is in regard to practical circulation, the three-cent piece now less popular, and has no longer a reason for existence now that postage is reduced to 2 cents, and the most coinage of the trade dollar unnecessary. The [illegible] of the amount of trade-dollars now held in the United States, and the [illegible] of coinage is unnecessary, [illegible] the act of February, 1887, was [illegible] dollars.

ILLINOIS.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 4.—[Special.]—The visit of State officers to Chicago [illegible] last week has set the tongues of candidates and politicians wagging at a lively rate, and from two sources in particular. The city of Chicago was naturally to attract the Canal Commission and overlook the canal operations which were in session. It is only the purpose was to test the public pulse on the question of State officers and associate the probabilities in Cook County for such various candidates to come before the Republican convention. It is not believed the [illegible] was entirely successful, particularly as to the Governorship, although the friends of Oglesby were somewhat [illegible] over their reception.

Gen. Oglesby was here Friday and had [illegible] with a number of prominent citizens. He seems to be keeping up an energetic activity for so many months in advance of the actual campaign. Gen. Rountree is also busy laying plans for the future and receiving [illegible] to all corners of the State. Many of the prominent supporters of both these candidates contend as confidently across-the-aisle as the contenders, and [illegible] a record of the last time of [illegible]. They predict that such a result will be brought about by a square division of the delegates between Oglesby [illegible] and from reasoning Hamilton on the other side, and that the unsupported vote for the latter of both will [illegible] to the success of Congressmen Farnum, Congressman Cannon, Congressman Henderson, Hank Town-send Smith, the Hon. [illegible], or some other equally prominent man.

[illegible]

There is a belief in certain quarters that the contest is likely to engender [illegible] to any event, but the feeling seems principally from the eastern part of the State, and especially from the Chicago delegations. There, there is a disposition to count the matter serious the Democratic factions. The friend of Mr. [illegible] in that district not but [illegible] action to all proceed to their proper [illegible] of a revival of the factional fights with Hamilton and Hollingsworth, and [illegible] to be strong. A Policeman Commits the Second Killing.

New York, Nov. 5.—[Special.]—Patrolman William Cooney was arrested early to-day by police station in East Thirty-fifth street, charged with murder. The victim of the policeman's fists was Peter Keenan, a laborer, whom he shot in the abdomen during a row in a liquor-store at No. 351 East Twenty-fifth street. The row in which the shooting took place occurred just before midnight. Detective Connors, who had evidently been drinking, found that Keenan was drunk and acting in a disorderly way in front of the liquor-store and he attempted to arrest him. Keenan resisted, struck him a staggering blow in the neck and broke away. When Connors endeavored to regain his prisoner a crowd of Keenan's friends gathered around and assisted him. The officer was knocked down, while some of the others attacked him with clubs, bottles and stones. He managed to get to his feet, however, and drawing his revolver fired at Keenan, who fell to the sidewalk. Connors then turned and ran, pursued by the crowd, which was augmented by the appearance of other policemen, and the latter had to fight their way through the crowd before they could reach the station.

WALL-STREET.

Exchange Closed and Gloom Settling Over the Street.

New York, Nov. 5.—[Special.]—At the Windsor Hotel this evening it was stated that a syndicate had agreed to take a large part of the $15,000,000 of Canadian Pacific stock and bonds, and will deposit $15,000,000 early this week in part payment. Bankers have agreed to advance the stock on the strength of this, and it is expected to control a good deal of stocks between now and Saturday.

The fact that W. K. Vanderbilt had declined not to open his city residence this season was taken as the positive evidence that he was hard up, and great fluctuations occurred right away.

The pessimists of the section who are making a fight on the Gilbert party in the Produce Exchange are jubilant over the result of the election, but the general impression seemed to be that the Chicago-controlled Northern Pacific and Chicago Transcontinental would perish as great disturbers to other stocks after the new arrangements have been made to the basis of investment.

The bankers of Jersey City, New York, Nov. 5.—[Special.]—The Stock Wall-street article says: The election has had the effect of clearing the fair volume of the short interest and of transferring some of the old issues into strong hands. Prominent among these is and the Manhattan. Gould has to a large extent withdrawn from the market for the present, and the stock is now in the hands of investors. The rise in which the shorts were caught napping was from 75 to 80, and the stock is now selling at 85. The Manhattan is also in strong hands, and the short interest is small. The Gould party is also in control of the Missouri Pacific, and the stock is now selling at 75. The Gould party is also in control of the Missouri Pacific, and the stock is now selling at 75. John M. Harmon, a second lawyer of considerable ability, has published a long and able letter addressed to Gov. Leland, of Texas, in reference to the status of the colored people in that State. Setting out with the statement that the recent decision of the Supreme Court has established the rights of colored men, he charges that through the revocation and administration of the laws in Texas great injustice is done to them. They are not treated fairly in the courts. The juries before which their cases are tried have no interest among their members. They are not tried by their peers. The stories of negro outrages and barbarous are circulated and invented, Mr. Harmon charges, to cover up murders and other crimes committed on these people, or to afford pretense for committing such crimes.

THE DECEMBER ATTACHE.

Be true or be found being the trade and the wheelbarrow to supply them here must always be a certain amount of business. It is only when the causes are removed to abnormal circumstances that the most important function of traffic is seriously deranged. To [illegible] the state of speculators for a decline that train has reached a desperate condition is seen to stare that the proprietor but nothing both ends meet. The fact is that the interior classes are better off than ever. They are fully employed, their wages have not been much reduced, and necessary expenses are lower than ever. Capitalists have incurred great losses on grain, provisions, clothing goods, and other staple articles, and consumers get the benefit of the shrinkage in prices. There is plenty of suffering among those who have been, but by administrations or excessive outlay, into overproducing or overbuying, but the suffering does not extend lower in the scale than laborers. Many of the rich men are less rich than they were two years ago and many of the most speculative have been swept away, but labor with head and hand is as well rewarded as ever, and the fruitful expenditure reserves from many magazines to speculate that would prove their ruin.

But this state of things cannot last long. If the present period of moderate demand for manufactured goods is a protracted one, wages must soon decline, laborers be forced out of employment, and general suffering ensue.

There is not much probability that such will be the result of the present crisis. The decline has already been too long in progress. There has been a wholesome fear of what might happen. Importations have diminished, manufacturers are producing only goods for [illegible], and general expenses have been reduced. There is, however, no promise of a revival soon. It was months ago that the iron men found a low price which prices should not go and there has been a gradual recession from that line. The production has been reduced one-third and it is likely that other [illegible] will go one of that. The coal trade is a little better off, but the New York operators have done worse than nothing for a succession of years, the whole time [illegible] to speculate through the influence of the Philadelphia branch of the [illegible]. Manufacturers of fabrics, too, are reaping no one to the [illegible] of overproduction on their part. Woolen mills which have commenced the market with their own peculiar notions are carrying their conviction to almost that both have found to be more popular, and [illegible] to turn are beginning to clog the market. Cotton goods are coming to correspond closely the world over. All the great manufacturing centers of England and France report [illegible] stagnant. The great [illegible] of last year, however, placed [illegible] to their hands at low prices, and manufacturers ought to be able to proceed on a moderate pace without loss.

There is one of the disastrous gloss to all have to recognize that in some periods since the revival of 1879, but one important of broad extent would be accelerated, even if it were not for the engagement on [illegible] of crops are ought to be doing, [illegible] to the East Side. Our farmers are prosperous and many of them are growing decidedly rich to [illegible] their grain for [illegible] prices. It is a question of only a few weeks when their products will move rapidly to [illegible]. And as we are a great [illegible] action one of the few that there is small prospect of any disastrous collapse in the grain or provision markets.

The world's crops have given the climate no new color, the insect [illegible] having had little effect in this country. Exercise have shown a degree of [illegible] which is characterized them, for a year or more ground for some encouragement. But the accounts [illegible] are of contradictory, and nothing has occurred to give shocks any more real value than that had a fortnight ago. Much depends on the crisis. If anything should happen to give prices a lift, a strong organization of bears would [illegible] thereby find an abundance of resources for putting the market back to the old level or lower. Few railroad stocks are low, consolidating have [illegible] been [illegible] and [illegible] has grown to the [illegible] point. Any one that wants to buy will do [illegible] to wait. It is long since the short and [illegible] markets have exhibited [illegible] relations with each other, and the effect of the world's movements of gold [illegible] to [illegible] and to be worth noting. There is a small [illegible] in the [illegible] of balances, but it does not appear that [illegible] any more than one of the [illegible] that [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible]. There is every evidence that many [illegible] of negotiation are merely paused and are likely to go [illegible]. There is no improvement in the feeling of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] during [illegible]. The [illegible] to [illegible] is one of the most hopeful signs of the times, and will greatly help in restoring us to a healthy condition. The present is that trade will move slowly for some months.

FIFTY ELECTION DISTRICTS.

[illegible] elections will be held in a number of these [illegible]. In Massachusetts, Maryland, Minnesota, and New Jersey [illegible] are to be elected. In Virginia, Mississippi, and Connecticut the people will choose Legislatures; in New York, Pennsylvania, and Nebraska subordinate State officers will be voted for. The widest popular interest centers in the New York, Connecticut, and Virginia elections, because the result in those States will have some bearing upon the Presidential contest next year. The Connecticut election comes in the [illegible] [illegible] to the Democratic victory in this and [illegible] by [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Australia, Oct. 5.—[Special Correspondence.]—On the average American the great island continent of Australia is an unknown land. Before having visited for a few hours I scanned the bookstores for literature that would in some degree enlighten me as to "the living present" of these colonies, but the search was in vain. Indeed, histories told me of the landing of Capt. Cook at Botany Bay—and reference was made to the fact that criminals were sent to that place during much of the last half of the eighteenth, and the first forty years of the present century. Then I traveled the ingleside of the speculative passage of gold to the south between 1850 and 1860. This was the sum and last of obtainable knowledge. If the records of to-day had ever been properly written up, I was unfortunate in not search for any book containing its history. Unless to the Centennial Exhibition will count the immense global stock which was intended to represent the gold product of Australia, and the long row of figures setting forth its weight and form, as well as the cupidity of the discovering people, constitute the entire literature of the subject. Even these facts, though more modern, than the oldest histories, brought little knowledge to American commerce the enterprising people found here and the extraordinary sum, comprehending more square miles than to within the territorial limits of the United States exclusive of Alaska.

With a climate favoring the growth of cereals and vegetables in variety and promising rivaling the productions of any other country, peopled mostly though it be by English-speaking men of enterprise and wealth, there is little room for wonder that Australia has built up a Government and laid the foundation of a prospering future without attracting the notice of long Americans to any considerable extent.

I had long felt a desire to see this country. For many years identified with the industry of meat-growing in the United States, I had noticed with interest the auspicious products from Australian ports as it began to increase volume into the markets of Europe, and foreseen for American home trade was required beyond the supply from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic seaboard. Nothing else that determined me visit here, the study of these subjects by an unseen author from the desire to learn concerning the resources and possibilities of the young and growing country.

Seventy-five hundred miles of sea voyage, more than enough made at the rate of 10 miles per day, is not calculated to render the study of land attractive to the traveler, but the voyage was exercise. Fair Jackson (Oyster Harbor), made as such attention to face trip to be attractive. Friends and ports, good preparation usually upon the ships to such basic attention as to make the completeness of travel, books from fortune, does and cells, and, finally, the delicate fear treating the of fatherly help into the service of the world to distract from the fear of sea to fear of completing the quest.

THE SEA VOYAGE.

Questions are provided for during Pacific ocean between their own country and Australia. Many of these are brought about by the fact that the passengers are to the Australian to his personal interest in the country. I further notice that such comparisons as I have been able to make have developed per cent more interest in the people of these colonies toward the United States of America, especially the more intelligent among them, than was the case with the average American toward them before the visit. Questions are asked by Australians in regard to financial matters, the management of manufacturing and mechanical establishments, and to the intelligence on the capital and of these men of these colonies and trading towns, do they seem to be other country we meet in the world that knows so little of the position of Australia, and is so far behind in general information.

WHAT THEY EXPORT.

But it is not alone in the production of food that Australia stands prominently to the front as a factor upon the price of articles to which the farmers of the United States pay a direct interest. It has an annual interchange of exports and imports almost a duplicate of existing ones in the European markets. The balance of trade and shipping must be just as attractive to the lovers of capitalists all over the world. The commodities of export include wool, tallow, hides, gold, silver, and lead. Australia can now be supposed independent of a market for large investments of capital in pastoral and commercial enterprises, and the interest of the country is to invite capitalists and immigrants to turn their attention to the colonies. In this connection I have made inquiries as to the rate of interest on money, and find that the current rate is 8 per cent, and that money cannot be had at that rate on good security. The rate of interest is higher than in the United States, and the rate of exchange is in favor of Australia. The rate of exchange is now 9 per cent in favor of Australia, and the

A GOSPEL "POEM."

C. H. Spencer, the Oneida evangelist, inaugurated a new gospel mission yesterday morning at the Methodist Episcopal Church, on the Lake Shore. It must not be supposed by the friends of a new house church, at the end of which was a pot-boil young man, the principal and active gentleman.
